

moniquemeloche

451 N Paulina Street, Chicago 60622
312 243 2129 moniquemeloche.com

CHICAGO MAGAZINE

Ten Things to Do This Week in Chicago

Don't-miss picks for January 31 through February 6, 2019

Maia Cruz Palileo: All the While I Thought You Had Received This

ART: During the summer of 2017, this Brooklyn artist dug through the Newberry Library's vast collection and found a strange trove of 19th-century photographs of indigenous people of the Philippines taken by the American zoologist Dean C. Worcester. The photos channeled the harmful intentions of colonialism, so Palileo, who is Filipina, decided to revise those images into colorful, intimate canvases as a way to imagine a new, positive history of her culture. This is her first solo exhibit in Chicago.